July 27, 2017 -- Landover, Maryland

The Epilepsy Foundation is proud to announce Green Bay Packers quarterback Brett Hundley is officially an Athletes vs Epilepsy ambassador.

The Epilepsy Foundation's Athletes vs Epilepsy initiative is a nationwide program for athletes, coaches, volunteers, and fans to support new therapies and research for people with epilepsy. The initiative brings awareness in all sports through participation by athletes of all ages and skill levels as well as their supportive friends, family, and fans.

The Epilepsy Foundation and Epilepsy Foundation Heart of Wisconsin kicked off this partnership with Hundley at Lambeau Field on July 20, 2017. At the event, Hundley and the families exchanged inspiring stories. Some lucky children even got to arm wrestle and take photos with Hundley. Children also asked Hundley questions about epilepsy and football.

“I am honored to be an Athletes vs Epilepsy ambassador,” Hundley said. “The Epilepsy Foundation is an amazing organization to be a part of and this particular program resonates with me. I’m asking everyone to get involved and help me raise awareness for epilepsy through athletics. Join us. Fundraise. Get out there!”

“Brett has been an integral part of raising awareness for the Epilepsy Foundation. We are grateful for his continued support and are excited to continue our partnership through the Athletes vs Epilepsy program,” said Nichole Manning-Ashe, director of Athletes vs Epilepsy.

During football season, Hundley will be supporting the program via social media. Post season, he will play a larger part of upcoming events.
